Cinco de Mayo Isn't Mexico's Independence Day

Cinco de Mayo commemorates a significant battle during the Franco-Mexican War that took place in a town called Puebla. Mexican Independence Day actually occurred on September 16, 1810.

6 Facts about Cinco De Mayo...

The Mexican Army Beat Crazy Odds

2000 Mexican soldiers defeated 6000 French soldiers during the battle which lasted from daybreak to early evening.

Kids Get May 5 Off from School—In Mexico

Cinco de Mayo is not a federal holiday in Mexico, but schools are closed for the day! In 2005, The United States Congress made Cinco de Mayo an official U.S. holiday; however, it is not a federal holiday.

6 Facts about Cinco De Mayo...

Most Festive "Mexican" Foods Enjoyed in the U.S. Aren't Actually Mexican

What many Americans think of as Mexican cuisine (e.g., ground beef tacos, nachos, burritos, etc.) is actually 'Tex-Mex,' which is a uniquely American culinary blend of popularized Texas foods inspired by the Tejanos people.

Americans Eat Millions of Avocados on May 5

According to the California Avocado Commission, Americans eat upward of 80 million pounds of avocados on Cinco de Mayo!

Teacher Testimonials

My students love Denise's keyboarding files. When you can use the same sort of activity all year and the students still like them - you know they are good!!!

Great resource for my students. It was very helpful.

Thank you! This is an OUTSTANDING addition to my Keyboarding curriculum resources. Students are engaged and it is a nice change of pace! As always...this was very well done and has made my life easier!

My Students loved this resource and loved the matching game at the end!

I used this in my Computer Applications class on May 5th last year. The students were engaged the whole period and we also talked about their favorite Mexican foods.
