I PUT CHRISTMAS MUSIC ON AND LET THEM TYPE!

What is an 'Easter Egg'?

Easter eggs are akin to hidden treasures buried within the cinematic landscape, waiting to be unearthed by the keenest of observers. These hidden references, inside jokes, or secret messages are delicately woven into the fabric of the film, often going unnoticed during a casual viewing.

The term "Easter egg" comes from Atari manager Steve Wright, who was inspired by the idea of hidden surprises in games, similar to the excitement of hunting for Easter eggs on Easter morning.

John Hughes Easter egg - When Kevin looks at the Christmas tree outside Rockefeller Center, the star at the top of the tree is between two illuminated windows that form the shape of John Hughes' company logo.

Most of the movie's interior scenes were filmed at New Trier West High School in Northfield, Illinois. The family who owned the house where the movie was filmed lived there for about five and a half months.

The movie's cinematographer, Julio Macat, was inspired by cartoons like Roadrunner and Bugs Bunny to create

The tarantula that crawls on Daniel Stern's face was a real tarantula.

The movie 'Angels with Filthy Souls' that Kevin watches is a collection of footage created specifically for the movie, but it pays homage to films of the era.

Macaulay Culkin's younger brother, Kieran Culkin, played Kevin's cousin Fuller.

The McCallister family's striking Chicago dwelling recently hit the market for $5.25 million and found a new owner in about a week in 2024.

John Candy improvised most of his lines in the movie, even though he was only on set for one day.

In 1990, the year the movie was released, the McCallister family home would have only been affordable by the top 1% of Chicago households.
