FAQ

Q: Is this Accounting course tied to a specific Accounting textbook?

A: No. This curriculum is not textbook-specific. You can use it independently or pair it with the Accounting textbook your school already uses.

Q: Is this course appropriate for a new or newer Accounting teacher?

A: Yes! I intentionally included video walkthroughs, teacher notes, instructional strategies, answer keys, pacing guidance, and implementation suggestions to help new teachers teach accounting confidently. Also, great for homeschooling parents.

Q: Will veteran Accounting teachers find this useful?

A: Absolutely. Veteran teachers can use the entire sequence or select the lessons, activities, simulations, and projects that complement their existing curriculum.

Q: Are these just PowerPoint presentations?

A: No. This is not “death by PowerPoint.” The course includes interactive digital lessons, presentations, simulations, journal-entry activities, T-account practice, financial analysis, source-document work, critical-thinking prompts, career activities, and a capstone project. Some lessons can be presented through teacher-led instruction, if you choose, while others work well as independent practice, partner work, student-led learning, review, or assessment.

SCIENTIFIC FACT: The more ways students interact with content, the stronger their understanding and retention.

Teacher Instructions

This interactive notebook is designed to help students organize course content while building understanding through writing and reflection.

Each lesson follows the same format:

1. Content Page – Students begin by adding the content page to their interactive notebook. I recommend projecting the Teacher Version so students can copy the completed notes onto their notebooks. This helps even if they are on the same page and provides accurate reference notes throughout the course.
2. Vocabulary – After the content page is entered or glued into the notebook, have students look at the accompanying vocabulary terms. On the interactive notebook page, students should write each term and complete definitions or explanations.
3. Critical Thinking Questions – Each lesson concludes with critical thinking questions that encourage students to apply what they have learned. These questions work well as independent practice, partner discussions, bell ringers, exit tickets, or homework. They are also an excellent option for days when you want to provide a meaningful, technology-free learning activity.

*This teacher's file deliberately does not include answer keys to the critical thinking questions as answer will vary and responses are subjective.

By following this consistent structure throughout the course, students will create a notebook that serves as both a study guide and a valuable reference for future lessons and assessments.

Grading Suggestions

I recommend grading your students' interactive notebooks throughout the course. This encourages students to stay caught up, take pride in their work, and put effort into each lesson.

Consider grading the following:

- Notebook participation – Students complete the required notebook activities.
- Organization and neatness – Pages are in order, easy to read, and well maintained.
- Critical thinking responses – These responses show that students understand the lesson.

A simple grading method is to assign points for each critical thinking question. To earn all 5 points, students should write a thoughtful, complete response that demonstrates their understanding of the content. Responses should go beyond a one-word or one-sentence answer and include enough detail to explain their thinking.

*I always gave notebook grades each grading period.--not each week
